

THE POWER OF RAILROADS

"Such is the power of railroad images in the hands of creative American filmmakers."

Few human inventions attract more interest than railroads and the trains which run on them. It is not surprising that rail scenes, even if only a minor part of a film, frequently find use in title sequences and promotional presentations. Such is the power of railroad images in the hands of creative American filmmakers.

Railroads and productions have vastly different cultures. Productions are highly creative endeavors, quickly organized and speedily completed. Detailed work plans change in response to collective genius, and filming schedules thusly are often revised.

Railroad companies, on the other hand, are production company's near polar opposite. Railroads must focus on operating the same way, day after day. Abrupt schedule changes are avoided. Due to inherent risks, railroad work must be thoughtfully and carefully performed. Extensive safety rules and federal regulations cover every task.

Rail Transportation Management Specialists is very proud of the firm's success in bringing the rail and production industries harmoniously together. The images captured on film are credits to skilled railroaders and creative production professionals.

Every RTMS Professional Railroaders Serving the Production Industry project has developed key personnel from both industries who understood the cultural differences; agreed to compromises; and then stepped out smartly to attain a common goal. Creating this spirit of teamwork, understanding, and cooperation is perhaps our crowning achievement.

We look forward to serving your production, creatively and safely.

Rail Transportation Management Specialists will bring the Rail and Production industries together in mutually beneficial partnerships to safely maximize the rail industry's contributions to a film project's on-screen production values.
